

Contents

- 6 Introduction

- 8 Juan Gerardo Oliva Salinas
Three Cultures and Ways of Making Reinforced Concrete Shells

- 16 Matthias Ludwig
Relations between Félix Candela, Heinz Isler, and Ulrich Müther

- 24 Matthias Beckh
Spaces for Industry
A Comparison of Modular Shell Systems by Félix Candela and Heinz Isler

- 34 Wilfried Dechau
Candela Isler Müther
A Photographic Essay

- 54 Juan Ignacio del Cueto Ruiz-Funes
Félix Candela's Hypar Groined Vaults
Mexican Contribution to the Development of Concrete Shells

- 62 Elisa María Teresa Drago Quaglia
Beautifully Shaped Forms
The Shells of Enrique de la Mora and Félix Candela

- 70 María González Pendás
The Bodily Economies of Concrete Technologies

- 76 Eduardo Alarcón Azuela
Félix Candela's Last Shells in Mexico
The Roof Structures for Mexico City's Underground Stations

- 84 Marisela Mendoza
Félix Candela's Legacy in the United Kingdom

- 90 Matthias Beckh and Rainer Schützeichel
The Formative Years of Heinz Isler

- 98 Giulia Boller and John Chilton
Heinz Isler's Experimental Approach to Form-Finding

- 110 Matthias Beckh
From Foam to Form
The Peculiar First Free-form Shells of Heinz Isler
- 118 Elke Genzel and Pamela Voigt
More than Concrete
Heinz Isler's Projects in Glass Fiber Reinforced Plastics
- 126 Rainer Schützeichel
(Re)presenting Shells
Heinz Isler's Work on Display
- 134 Andreas Schätzke
"New Constructions"
The Beginnings of Shell Building in the German Democratic Republic
- 142 Tanja Seeböck
Safe at Last?
The Fate of Ulrich Müther's Magdeburg Hypar Shell in a Changing Society
- 150 Susanne Brorson
The Music Pavilion in Sassnitz
A Shell Structure by Ulrich Müther in Collaboration with Dietmar Kuntzsch and Otto Patzelt
- 158 Georg Giebeler
Ulrich Müther: Quantity or Quality?
- 172 Zusammenfassungen
- 183 Resúmenes
- 194 Acknowledgments
- 195 Picture Credits
- 196 Index of Names
- 198 Index of Places